The plan expressed an enlightenment conception of the town as the seat of civic power within a large and productive agricultural hinterland. Contrary to these ideals, Perth would become the commercial center of the colony, and later, metropolitan region with a layout that has remained relatively unchanged to the present day. However, the construction of the Kwinana Freeway between Parliament House and St Georges Terrace in the 1960s can be seen as a final attempt to deliver on the original objective of separating civil and commercial centres of power. fb3db26b5c == Geography == fb3db26b5c The sediments of the Perth Basin are Tertiary and Quaternary in age immediately below Perth and include coquina, travertine, and sandy limestones with abundant shelly material.
