Marriage in ancient Greece (ἑταί, etai, "clansmen") through the exchange of gifts in preparation for the transfer of the bride. Each city was politically independent and each had its own laws concerning marriage. Marriages were usually arranged by the parents; on occasion professional matchmakers were used. Wintertime marriages were popular due to the significance of that time to Hera, the goddess of marriage. The couple participated in a ceremony which included rituals such as veil removal, but it was the couple living together that made the marriage legal. According to these records, the goal and focus of all marriages was intended to be reproduction, making marriage an issue of public interest. Daughters were usually married to uncles or cousins. For the marriage to be legal, the woman's father or guardian gave permission to a suitable man who could afford to marry. Marriage was understood to be the official transition from childhood into adulthood for women.
