These horseless carriages were of the "high-wheeler" variety with large wagon-type wheels. Their high ground clearance was well-suited to muddy, wagon-rutted country roads. Customers were accustomed to mail ordering through the Sears catalog, and the Sears Motor Buggy could be delivered to the nearest railroad siding. A wood crate would arrive, and the customer had to install the wheels and add oil to the engine. They were treated as loss leaders, designed to enhance prestige to the Sears brand and bring publicity to the catalog retailer. Nevertheless, Sears deemed the product not profitable at $370 for the most basic model and dropped the line from the catalog after 3,500 orders. 421062e017 She started skating
