Going into the month, the mood was bright and excitement was high for record speeds. Competitors, media, and fans were eagerly anticipating the possibility of breaking the elusive and daunting 200 mph (321.9 km/h) barrier during time trials. The month took a tragic turn, however, when driver Art Pollard died in a crash during a practice session on the morning of May 12. Later that same day, Johnny Rutherford set a new track record during time trials. His best lap of 199.071 mph (320.4 km/h) fell just short of breaking the highly sought-after speed barrier.
