Consumer electronics include those used for entertainment, communications, and recreation. Since the 2010s, this distinction has been absent in big box consumer electronics stores, whose inventories include entertainment, communication, and home office devices, as well as home appliances. This term is used to distinguish them from "white goods", which are meant for housekeeping tasks, such as washing machines and refrigerators. Historically, these products were referred to as "black goods" in American English due to many products being housed in black or dark casings 18a05b2835
