The Morris Newspaper Corporation division owns and operates publications including dailies, shoppers, and specialty magazines in four states: == Background and activism == The roots of Barnett Bros. Circus trace back to 1922, when its founder, Ray W. Rogers, discovered show business after charging admission to view a caged eagle that fascinated his town. He soon expanded with carnival concessions such as fortune wheels and games of skill, which became the "Rogers Exposition Show" by 1926. He operated in the Maritime Provinces, with headquarters at Halifax, Nova Scotia. A year later, he toured Newfoundland and Labrador, and from this venture, a new circus emerged. The Barnett Bros. Circus was founded by Ray Rogers in 1927. He went into partnership with William Hamilton. Although no one named Barnett was connected to the show, Rogers explained that it simply sounded like a good circus name, so they adopted it. The circus toured Canada alone for two years before crossing into the United States in 1929.
