Hura owned Bouncer, who was a puppy when he joined the show. Hura said that he taught Bouncer to understand 70 commands, stating: "He may have looked as if he was just doing what dogs do naturally, but everything Bouncer did in front of the camera was 'acting'." Hura said Bouncer "loved every minute" of his time in Neighbours and often couldn't wait to get in the car and go to the studio. As Bouncer became more of a regular on the show, Hura had to relocate from Adelaide to Melbourne to accommodate his filming schedule. Bouncer was paid more than the human actors and Hura revealed that he was worth between $100,000 and $200,000. When he made personal appearances, he travelled in a stretch limo... 3ef993f801
