The Hostess CupCake was first sold on May 10, 1919. According to author Andrew F. Smith, it was the first commercially produced cupcake, originally produced by the Taggart Bakery as the Chocolate Cup Cake. Hostess has also claimed that it was "the first snack cake ever introduced to the market." In 1989, rival Tastykake disputed this claim, stating that they introduced the first snack cake. 7033a88112 The most common variation involves combining gelatin mix and warm water, and then pouring the liquid over a sheet cake. The cake is then refrigerated until it has set.

In the United States, English settlers were unable to make traditional suet puddings due to lack of suitable ingredients and cooking equipment. Using Dutch ovens, the settlers covered a stewed filling with a layer of pastry. Later versions were instead covered with a layer of uncooked plain biscuits, scone batter or dumplings, fitted together. The first recorded recipe for a cobbler is possibly in the 1839 book The Kentucky Housewife by Lettice Bryant, where it is called a "Peach Pot Pie or Cobler". The origin of the name cobbler is uncertain: it may be related to the archaic word cobeler, meaning "wooden bowl", or the term may be due to the topping having the visual appearance... 7033a88112 Among the earliest published recipes was submitted by a reader ("Mrs. Tom A.
