Consumer electronics refrigerators, washing machines, radios, televisions, air conditioning, and microwave ovens, households have gained an escalating number of appliances. In British English, they are often called "brown goods" by producers and sellers. Historically, these products were referred to as "black goods" in American English due to many products being housed in black or dark casings. Since the 2010s, this distinction has been absent in big box consumer electronics stores, whose inventories include entertainment, communication, and home office devices, as well as home appliances. Consumer electronics include those used for entertainment, communications, and recreation. This term is used to distinguish them from "white goods", which are meant for housekeeping tasks, such as washing machines and refrigerators. Despite Consumer electronics, also known as home electronics, are electronic devices intended for everyday household use 32b7ef598c
