The title of the album, Bottoms Up, was chosen as Obie Trice was keen to keep the alcohol-related theme for his album titles. He had begun working on the album while in the process of releasing his second album, Second Round's on Me. As of 21 May 2007, Obie Trice told MTV that he was at the time "a few songs deep", and had by that point collaborated with just Daz Dillinger. He also stated that he'd like to get work done with Eminem, 50 Cent, Slaughterhouse, Young Buck, Akon, Cashis, Jazze Pha, and Devin the Dude. On the topic of collaborating, Obie Trice also explained to MTV, "I don't really know a lot of artists—I'm in Detroit. It's not Atlanta, where everybody is everywhere, or L.A. or somewhere like that. I actually think it's time for me to start branching off and start connecting with cats. Getting my collaboration on and working... 47c0a29ce5

With the advent of the compact disc (CD), music is encoded to a digital format with a clearly defined maximum peak amplitude. Once the maximum amplitude of a CD is reached, loudness can be increased still further through signal processing techniques such as dynamic range compression and equalization. Engineers can apply an increasingly high ratio of compression to a recording until it peaks more frequently at the maximum amplitude, a technique colloquially known as brickwalling. In extreme cases, efforts to increase loudness can result in clipping... 47c0a29ce5 Gerard Arthur Way was born in Summit, New Jersey, on April 9, 1977, the son of Donna Lee (née Rush) and Donald Way. Loudness war Increasing loudness was first reported as early as the 1940s, with respect to mastering practices for 7-inch singles. The maximum peak level of analog recordings such as these is limited by varying specifications of electronic equipment along the chain from source to listener, including vinyl and cassette players. The issue garnered renewed attention starting in the 1990s with the introduction of digital signal processing capable of producing further loudness increases. The day was a success and its follow-ups in the following years have built on this, gaining industry support from The loudness war (or loudness race) is a trend of increasing audio levels in recorded music, which reduces audio fidelity and—according to many critics—listener enjoyment. that "Dynamic music sounds better"

It's All Coming Back to Me Now According to Steinman, the song was inspired by Wuthering Heights and was intended as "the most passionate, romantic song" he could create. Steinman won a court case that prevented Meat Loaf from recording it. Meat Loaf, who had collaborated with Steinman on many of his hit songs, had wanted to record the track for years, but Steinman refused, saying he viewed it as a "woman's song". Media described "It's All Coming Back to Me Now" as "passionate, full-blown pop/rock" with "dramatic build-ups" and noted its similarity to T'Pau. Mark "It's All Coming Back to Me Now" is a power ballad written by Jim Steinman. Girl group Pandora's Box recorded the first released version, and the song later became widely known through a cover by Celine Dion, which upset Meat Loaf because he had planned to use it for an album with the working title Bat Out of Hell III 47c0a29ce5
