Table tennis beginning in the mid-1980s increased the spin and speed even further, resulting in changes to the equipment to "slow the game down". Either individually or in teams of two, players take alternating turns returning a light, hollow ball over the table's net onto the opposing half of the court using small rackets until they fail to do so, which then results in a point for the opponent. Play is fast, requiring quick-fired reactions and constant attention, and is characterized by an emphasis on spin, which can affect the ball's trajectory more than in other ball sports. Some authors distinguish the two layers as Early and Late Middle Chinese respectively. The method gave a significantly more precise and systematic account of the sounds of those dictionaries than the previously used f#anqi#e analysis, but many of its details remain obscure. The phonological system that is implicit in the rime dictionaries and analysed in the rime tables is known as Middle Chinese, and is the traditional starting point for efforts to recover the sounds of early forms of Chinese d4d4c8bcf1
