Acuff-Rose was formed by country music performer Roy Acuff and Fred Rose, a major Nashville music-industry figure and songwriter, who had a respected ability as a talent scout. Many country performers had been badly cheated in the past with regard to copyright and other rights to their creations. Many were unsophisticated and naive and were taken advantage of by unscrupulous agents, attorneys, record promoters, record labels and others. When they started their publishing company, a condition to the gentleman's agreement between Acuff and Rose was that "our company would be honest. The writers would always be taken care of. No one would act in a shady way." Acuff-Rose Publications, Inc. was affiliated with BMI, while Milene Music, Inc. handled music from ASCAP member composers. Both firms initiated business in 1943 with Fred Rose compositions; Acuff-Rose Publications, Inc. copyrighted four songs (under Rose's pseudonym 'Floyd Jenkins') on January 28, while... 1410c326f6 == Early history == 1410c326f6

National Rose Gardens Their location in front of the (then Provisional) Old Parliament House was planned to enhance the setting of the House. This consists of The National Rose Gardens are heritage-listed rose gardens located in Parkes, a suburb of Canberra, in the Australian Capital Territory of Australia. They were intended to provide an interest for all Australians in developing Canberra, the national capital, as a garden city. In the development of the Gardens, roses were contributed by all States in Australia. In horticultural terms the Gardens have provided the opportunity to exhibit the best varieties of Australian grown and overseas roses in a favourable climate. The Gardens demonstrate a distinctive early example of twentieth century public garden design in a formal style. The Gardens are valued by visitors to Canberra as well as the local community for their aesthetic qualities. The rose beds in each garden are laid out in plan to symbolise the petals of a fully opened rose. Conceived in 1926 and opened in 1933, they were Australia's first national gardening project and were planned as a physical expression of the principle of cooperation between the Commonwealth and the States. perimeter plantings of trees and the lawn 1410c326f6

== Description == 1410c326f6 Now the central section of the park is decorated with several lakes covering nine hectares. About 50 varieties of trees and bushes grow there. There is a stage with a capacity of 1000 spectators, a small amusement park with a Ferris wheel, and the restaurants Doina (destroyed), Cetatea Veche ("The Old Fortress"), and Curtea Vînătorească ("The Hunters' Court"). The remains of several stone idols were preserved and restored in the 1970s in the form of decorative statues. Also preserved were the stairs that led to the altars and the foundation of an ancient construction on the shore of one of the lakes — now part of the restaurant Cetatea Veche. 1410c326f6
