The crosslinking can be carried out to a limited degree to give resins. Either the melamine-formaldehyde resins or melamine-formaldehyde "monomer" can be cured by treatment with any of several polyols. As a thermosetting plastic, melamine resin is hardened by placing it in powder form in a mold, closing it and then exerting high pressure on it in a press, until the resin hardens into a solid product such as tableware. The raw powder is also known as amino melamine compound, and versions that replace melamine with urea exist for non-food applications. Liquid forms of melamine resin are used as adhesives in wood... b819481fe1 Until the early 1990s, the most common solvents that were used for the ink in permanent markers were toluene and xylene. These two substances are both harmful and characterized by a very strong smell.
