Active during both day and night, the pool frog is a predator that feeds mainly on invertebrates as an adult, but begins its life as a tadpole with a herbivorous diet. The breeding season is in early summer, when males use vocalisations to ward one another off and attract females. The frogs are sensitive to changes in temperature, which determines their reproductive behaviour and calls. Mating and egg-laying... 3c6717611a Pooles Island was originally named Powell's Island by John Smith, but over the years the name was changed, possibly to reflect the numerous springs and pools on the island. The island was famed in the 18th and 19th centuries for its fertility, particularly for the peaches raised there in the 1880s and '90s. As it lies near the center of the bay near the mouth of the Gunpowder River, it was one of the first places in the area considered for a lighthouse, and in 1824 Congress appropriated $5,000 for construction of a light. John Donahoo and Simon Frieze won the contract to build it, the first of many lights constructed by Donahoo. The roughly constructed granite tower and keeper's house were joined three years later by a fog bell tower, the first in the state. In 1857 the original system of Argand lamps and reflectors was replaced by a fourth order Fresnel lens. 3c6717611a

Plus Pool was designed to clean the waters of the East River and provide a public space for water-based recreation. The pool's name comes from the fact that it would be shaped like a plus sign. The original design called for four separate pools (lounge, kids', watersports, and lap-swimming pools) that combine to create a 9,000 square feet (840 m2) pool with several lap lanes. 3c6717611a The toponym Malebo, the plural of lilebo in Lingala, refers to the Borassus palm that grows abundantly along the pool's shores, islands, and surrounding alluvial plains, while the term pool is borrowed from English, where it denotes a basin and, by extension, a lake. It was the first album self-produced by the band. In an interview with Zoë Radas, the band explained "It just gave us so much more freedom. We also both had the same idea that we weren't really concerned about trying to capture these really beautiful mics in a really beautiful room; we were happy with any decent mic into a laptop. I guess we just felt like the ideas and the messages and the melodies were what were most important". 3c6717611a

== Concept == 3c6717611a == History == 3c6717611a Prior to Plus Pool, New York City has had many 'floating baths' moored along the Hudson and East Rivers. A floating pool known as the 'Floating Pool Lady' was created at Brooklyn Bridge Park in 2007 and continues to operate in Barretto Point Park in the Bronx. 3c6717611a Each year, the Supreme Court receives thousands of petitions for certiorari; in 2001 the number stood at approximately 7,500, and had risen to 8,241 by October Term 2007. The court will ultimately grant approximately 80 to 100 of these petitions, in accordance with the rule of four. The workload of the court would make it difficult for each justice to read each petition; instead, in days gone by, each justice's law clerks would read the petitions and surrounding materials, and provide a short summary of the case, including a recommendation as to whether the justice should vote to hear the case. 3c6717611a
