Fish diseases and parasites Fish defences against disease are specific and non-specific. Non-specific defences include skin and scales, as well as the mucus layer secreted by the epidermis that traps microorganisms and inhibits their growth. cod European Community Reference Laboratory for Fish Diseases Fish farming Fish kill Fish toxins Fish medicine List of aquarium diseases Mathematical modelling Like humans and other animals, fish suffer from diseases and parasites. If pathogens breach these defences, fish can develop inflammatory responses that increase the flow of blood to infected areas and deliver white blood cells that attempt to destroy the pathogens b17acaa6c3

== Parasites == b17acaa6c3 Recently, a co-worker met with an alternative health practioneer and participated in an "ionic foot bath." He described all of the ickey things coming out of his feet (including what appeared to be "live" worms. Ever the skeptical one, I did some investigating. Here on Wikipedia, the closest thing I could find was an article on detoxification foot pads. Using Google, I found a plethora of info (all promoting ionic foot baths!). So, here is my question: Since there is no scientific evidence to support the claims of ionic foot baths, what is really happening in the wather that makes it look like things (including worms) are being drawn from the body via the soles of the feet? —Preceding unsigned comment added by 209.161.212.185 (talk) 03:35, 16 April 2009 (UTC) b17acaa6c3 The oil is prepared from cajeput leaves and twigs macerated in water, and steam distilled after fermenting for a night. The resulting oil is extremely pungent, flammable, and has the odor of a mixture of turpentine, eucalyptus and camphor. It consists mainly of terpenes such as cineol, from which cajuputene, having a hyacinth-like odor, can be obtained by distillation with phosphorus pentoxide. It is a typical volatile oil, and is used internally in doses of 2 to 3 minims, for the same purposes as clove oil. b17acaa6c3 == Uses == b17acaa6c3 == Ionic detox == b17acaa6c3 Total views: 589,241 b17acaa6c3

It is an option for those who prefer to use natural remedies on their tank. However, among aquarists, its usefulness is debated on the basis of its efficacy and potential harm to anabantoid fish such as Betta splendens. b17acaa6c3 The primary reason for this list is to allow for checking for recent changes to any of the articles by using the Related changes link. This not only allows others to review changes but to fix any vandalism (usually done by anonymous IPs). If you manually add a page here (at the bottom of the page), make sure you use the template in the article so it's automatically included in the next list update. b17acaa6c3 It can be generated using WPCleaner by any user. Cajeput oil bettas. It is most commonly used to promote fin and tissue regrowth, but is also considered effective in treating other conditions, such as fin rot or Cajuput oil (also spelled cajeput) is a volatile oil obtained by distillation from the leaves of the myrtaceous trees Melaleuca leucadendra, Melaleuca cajuputi, and probably other Melaleuca species. The majority of the oil is produced on the Indonesian island of Sulawesi. The name "cajeput" is derived from its Malay name, kayu putih or "white wood". The trees yielding the oil are found throughout Maritime Southeast Asia and over the hotter parts of the Australian continent b17acaa6c3
