In the United States, car dealerships have historically been a significant source of revenue for local and state sales taxes. They possess significant political influence and have successfully lobbied for franchise laws that restrict or limit automakers from selling vehicles directly to consumers. By 2010, all 50 states and the District of Columbia had enacted some form of laws restricting direct manufacturer-to-consumer car sales, which helped support the survival of independent dealerships. Most states also restrict the establishment of new dealerships that compete with existing ones. Economists have described these regulations as a form of rent-seeking that increases consumer prices and limits competition, while raising profits for incumbent dealers. Jumble sales may be becoming less popular in the UK, as car boot sales and the World Wide Web enable people to sell their unwanted goods rather than donate them to charity. Outdoor car boot sales typically take place during the summer, but indoor boot sales and all-year hard-standing outdoor boot sales are now appearing in some parts of the UK. == United Kingdom == During World War II, the airport was used as a military airfield by both the Royal Air Force and the United States Army Air Forces. The 319th Bombardment Group briefly flew Martin B-26 Marauders from the airfield between 25 April and 1 June 1943. After the Americans moved out their combat units in mid-1943, the airport was used as a stopover and landing field for Air Transport Command aircraft on the Casablanca-Algiers transport route. When the war ended, control of the airfield was returned to civil authorities. In the United Kingdom, the structure of car retailing differs from that of the United States. Dealerships... Sale of the Century Sale of the Century (stylized as $ale of the Century) is an American television game show that originally debuted on September 29, 1969, on NBC daytime Sale of the Century (stylized as $ale of the Century) is an American television game show that originally debuted on September 29, 1969, on NBC daytime. The series aired until July 13, 1973, and a weekly syndicated series began that fall and ran for one season. It was one of three NBC game shows to premiere on that date, the other two being the short-lived game shows Letters to Laugh-In and Name Droppers

The first town plots went on sale in 1850. When the new settlement was gazetted in 1851 it was named "Sale" - a tribute to General Sir Robert Sale, a British army officer who won fame in the first Afghan war before being killed in battle in Mudki(Panjab) in 1845. An SBS TV documentary, Afghanistan: The Great Game – A Personal View by Rory Stewart, claims that it is actually named after his wife, Lady Florentia Sale (1790–1853), who wrote a famous journal of her experiences during the First Anglo-Afghan War which became a best seller in the 1840's and was serialised in The Times (UK) and possibly in Australia. Certainly, her letters to her husband were enthusiastically published in Australian papers. Alongside the basic rental of a vehicle, car rental agencies typically also offer extra products such as insurance, global positioning system (GPS) navigation systems, entertainment systems, mobile phones, portable WiFi and child safety seats. == Plot summary == Car boot sales are held in a variety of locations, including the grounds of schools and other community buildings, or in grass fields or car parks. The conditions of the goods vary, but they are typically usable. Some of these items are offered for sale because the owner does not want or need the item, to minimize their possessions or to raise funds. Popular motivations for a garage sale are for "spring cleaning", preparing to move home or earning extra money. The seller's items are displayed to the passers-by or those responding to signs, flyers, classified ads or newspaper ads. In some cases, local television stations will broadcast a sale on a local public channel. The venue at which the sale is conducted is typically a garage; other sales are conducted at a driveway, carport, front yard or inside a house. Some vendors, known as "squatters", will set up in a high-traffic area rather than on their own property.

Garage sales usually differ from rummage sales in that they are not event-related and are often organised individually (rather than collectively). The novel begins with Ben Holiday, a trial lawyer from Chicago, lamenting the loss of his wife and unborn child in a car accident. He finds an advertisement in an upscale Christmas catalog claiming to offer a magical kingdom for one million dollars by a man named Mr. Meeks. Although skeptical, Ben pursues the offer out of a desperate need to start a new life. The rights to the show were purchased in 1980 by Australian TV mogul Reg Grundy, who produced a similar show called Great Temptation in the 1970s. Grundy subsequently launched an Australian version of Sale of the Century. Grundy's modified format was then used in a revived American Sale of the Century that aired on NBC from January 3, 1983, to March 24, 1989. It was one of three NBC game shows premiering on the same date, along with Hit Man and Just Men! (both of which aired for only 13 weeks), and—like its predecessor—spawned a syndicated edition that ran from January 7, 1985, to September 12, 1986. Grundy's format has also been adopted in other countries. Organisers will usually ask local people to donate goods, which are set out on tables in the same manner as at car boot sales, and sold to members of the general public, who may have to pay a fee to enter the sale. Typically in the UK the entry fee is a few pence or pounds. The earliest known example of cars being offered for rent dates back to 1906. The German company...
